OVERVIEW

During 2018-2019, the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts (PCA) will support a limited number of Teacher and Artist Partnership (TAP) projects and Long-Term Residency (LTR) projects.

The funding available for these projects emphasizes long-term, in-depth interaction among professional teaching artists, teachers and students through workshops and classes sponsored by schools, non-profit organizations and units of government. All projects require that matching funds be provided by the host site.

Projects should enable the participants to understand the art form(s) involved and to develop their skills and creativity through that art form(s). Each project is locally designed and developed by the teaching artist, the project director and host site.

FOR TAPs ONLY: All TAP team members are required to attend the PCA week-long training that will be held in the summer of 2018 in Harrisburg. If all team members are unable to attend, funding may be delayed or withheld. At a minimum, TAP teams must include a project director, classroom teacher, the teaching artist and a school administrator. The TAP team members will learn the philosophy and techniques of the PCA TAP program, its components, and the requirements for participation by schools/school districts. NOTE: Lodging and travel costs for all team members to attend the TAP training must be included in the proposed project budget.

Teacher and Artist Partnership and Long-Term Residency Projects

TEACHER AND ARTIST (TAP) PARTNERSHIP DESCRIPTION

The Teacher and Artist Partnership (TAP) program is a long-term arts-based initiative for public or private nonprofit schools, designed and funded by the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts. Briefly, a TAP enables a K-12 teacher and artist to collaborate for at least 60 days to embed the arts into curriculum instruction. One of the aims of any TAP is to impact teachers' instructional strategies by showing the countless instructional possibilities offered through artful learning.

A TAP project is different from a traditional artist residency in a number of ways, including but not limited to the following:

- It is longer in length (a minimum of 60 days or equivalent);
- Both the artist and teacher teach lessons on an alternating schedule during the project period;
- Both the artist and teacher critique ("debrief") the lesson following its completion either immediately after the lesson or before the end of the school day;
- The school/district must provide time for the teacher to be involved in the debriefing critique as well as a private location for such a conference;
- The project director is required to conduct a minimum of five observations with documentation throughout the course of the project;
- Evaluation of the TAP project will continue beyond the submission and approval of the final report to the PCA. TAP teams are required to continue their evaluation into the subsequent year; and
- Both the artist and teacher will be observed by PCA staff/consultants/partners during the project period, and will be asked questions about all aspects of the project at various times during the project period.

TAP Project Requirements:

- Any entity receiving PCA funding for a TAP project must understand that it is a part of an ongoing action research endeavor and subject to active oversight by the PCA.
- The duration of each TAP project must allow for sufficient planning time for teachers, artists, and administrators and substantial periods of time in the school (a minimum of 60 days or equivalent). The artist should plan on about 15-20 hours per week in the school.
- Each TAP may include a visiting artist and a culminating event or performance, as appropriate in the artistic discipline.
- Each TAP project must:
 - Be constructed as a collaboration of the teacher, artist, project director and appropriate school administrators.
 - Have the team attend the PCA required TAP training in the summer of 2018
 - Include time to conduct at least two professional development workshops for school faculty, administrators, and artists, as appropriate.
 - Have artistic and curricular goals and objectives.
 - Engage learners in the creative process through appropriate activities that support the goals and objectives of the TAP project.
 - Include time to conduct evaluation planning, data collection and data analysis and conclude with a final, evaluative report in which the results of the analysis are presented along with conclusions drawn from the analysis and recommendations based on those conclusions.

- Have a plan and mechanism to document and share the evaluation information with authorizers, i.e., campus leadership, school district, school board, and the PCA.
- Share the students' and teacher's work process and progress with parents and the community.

TAP Structure:

The requirements for participating teachers, artists and administrative support systems in TAP projects are different from those in the usual residency model. Artists must be able to communicate clearly to teachers the basic elements and knowledge base of their art form(s) along with the skill sets necessary to create work in that form. Further, they must identify the key technical vocabulary and rhetorical elements used in the creation, performance/exhibition and critiquing of their art form. Specifically:

- Significantly more time is required for planning and on-going evaluation than under the usual residency model.
- The selection of both the teacher and the artist is critical to the TAP.
- The school must understand and support the requirements for planning and debriefing time and assist in the implementation of the program.
- Outcomes from the TAP program may be used by the PCA to promote and sustain subsequent programs.

LONG-TERM RESIDENCY (LTR) DESCRIPTION

Long-Term Residency (LTR) projects may take place in public or private non-profit schools, early childhood institutions, specialized schools, non-profit community organizations, public or government agencies, or non-profit social institutions.

An LTR project is different from a usual artist residency in a number of ways, including, but not limited to, the following:

- It is longer in length (a minimum of 60 days or equivalent).
- The project director is required to conduct observations and documentation throughout the course of the project.
- Both the artist and teacher may be observed by PCA staff/consultants during the project period.

LTR Project Requirements:

- The duration of each LTR project must allow for sufficient planning time for teachers, artists, and administrators and substantial periods of time in the school (a minimum of 60 days or equivalent). The artist should plan on an average of 15-20 hours per week at the host site.
- Each LTR may include a visiting artist and a culminating event or performance, as appropriate in the artistic medium.
- Each LTR project must:
 - Be constructed as a collaboration of the project director, host site staff and teaching artist.
 - Have artistic and curricular goals and objectives for school based projects.
 - Include time to conduct at least one professional development workshop for faculty, administrators, staff, and community as appropriate.
 - Engage learners in the creative process through appropriate activities that support the goals and objectives of the project.

- Include time to conduct evaluation planning, data collection and data analysis and conclude with a final, evaluative report in which the results of the analysis are presented.
- Have a plan and mechanism to document and share the evaluation information with authorizers, i.e., community, school district, school board, and the PCA.

LTR Structure:

- More time is required for planning and on-going evaluation than under the usual residency model.
- Outcomes from the LTR program may be used by the PCA to promote and sustain subsequent programs.

(20% in year two; 30% in year three; 40% in year four; 50% in year five) Teacher release time may be used toward the non-monetary match requirement. Priority in the selection process may be given to proposals with a larger monetary match from the school or other funding sources.
